

Rippling Water

By: Roxanne Davis

This picture is my favorite picture for the capturing of the movement in the water. I had taken this picture earlier this semester for another photography project. This picture was taken on the San Marcos Academy campus at the Alumni Plaza. The plaza was donated and dedicated to all those who have graduated from the Academy.

This still movement picture is based on the restlessness of the water. The composition of the picture isn't necessarily based on any of the rules that come along with photography, but the capture of an emotion while you look at it.

In my point of view when I look at this picture, I feel the outside restlessness of the ripples, but also the serenity and calmness of the water.
