

Dazed and Confused

The picture of the squirrel is special to me because it's funny, and it shows the beauty of nature. This photo uses compositional elements like rule of thirds and pattern. I like this picture because it makes me laugh; it was kind of hard to catch.

The category that this photo would fall under is nature. This squirrel is a weird and interesting way of expressing nature, but every time I look at this photo it makes me laugh.
